

Wintry Mix Late Tonight Until Early Friday Evening

New York, NY
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

OVERVIEW

Rain will change to a wintry mix of snow, sleet and freezing rain late tonight into Friday before tapering off late Friday afternoon into Friday evening. Dangerous travel conditions are of primary concern where ice accretes during both the morning and evening commute on Friday.

TONIGHT INTO FRIDAY

Ice Accumulation - Up to 0.20" is expected for the Lower Hudson Valley, interior northeast New Jersey, and interior southern Connecticut. Elsewhere, including NYC and coastal locations, less than 0.10" is expected.

- Timing – Transition to freezing rain/sleet begins late tonight to around daybreak Friday across the interior, toward 12PM for NYC, and early afternoon for Long Island and coastal Connecticut. Precipitation tapers from west to east late afternoon into early evening.
- Impacts – Possible hazardous travel during day and evening commute.

FORECAST UNCERTAINTY

- Higher confidence of ice amounts across interior where longer duration of ice expected. Less confidence of ice amounts closer to coast where less duration of ice expected.
- Timing and extent of cold air will determine exact precipitation types and ice accretions.
- Urban and poor drainage flooding is possible with snowmelt and moderate to heavy rain.

NWS ALERTS

- Winter weather advisory for parts of NE NJ, and all of the Lower Hudson Valley as well as Southern CT.
- Orange NY, Putnam NY, Western Passaic NJ (1AM to 6PM Fri).
- Rest of advisory (6AM to 6PM Fri) except Southern CT (6AM to 7PM Fri).
- If potential for freezing rain increases along the coast, more winter weather advisories may be needed.

NEXT BRIEF

- The next briefing will be by 7pm this evening.
